

For Immediate Release

March 9, 2009

Curran Tomko Tarski Attorney Joins Regional Land Sustainability Committee

DALLAS – Curran Tomko Tarski, L.L.P., is pleased to announce that Allison Exall has been placed in the Urban Land Institute's North Texas Sustainability Committee.

The Urban Land Institute, a non-profit organization which boasts over 34,000 members worldwide, provides leadership regarding responsible land use and planning. The North Texas chapter is comprised of land use professionals, industry leaders, community leaders, and public officials. Allison Exall is honored to be the only attorney asked to join the North Texas Sustainability Committee. This organization seeks to educate developers and community leaders regarding best practices for responsible land use, to raise public awareness, and to influence public policy with the goal of resolving regional land use issues.

"It's an honor for Allison to be asked to join this committee," says Curran Tomko Tarski Managing Partner Mike Curran. "We believe in the Urban Land Institute's mission and we know that Allison's involvement will benefit the community."

Curran Tomko Tarski, L.L.P., is a Dallas-based, multi-service law firm focused on practical, efficient solutions to complex legal issues. The firm represents local, regional and national companies ranging from small- and middle-market companies and organizations to Fortune 500 national corporations.

For more information, please contact Mitzi Lemons at 214-270-1400.